About Us

The company began as a simple business engaged in the trading of local fishery products. In its early stages, its activities focused on purchasing catches from fishermen and distributing them to traders and domestic markets. With experience in maintaining fish quality, building relationships with fishermen, and understanding market needs, the business gradually began to grow.

As demand for Indonesian fishery products increased, the company expanded its activities into processing and trading for export markets. Commodities that were initially marketed only locally were developed into export-quality products, including frozen fish, tuna, skipjack tuna, gindara, marlin, oilfish (gindara), swordfish, mahi-mahi, squid, and various other seafood products according to market demand.
